INTRODUCTION

A quick perusal of a map of China suggests that the southern point of the Liaodong Peninsula must be an excellent site for witnessing south-bound bird migration. Numerous birds have been seen, and written about, here since the middle of the 18th century (e.g. Swinhoe 1861, Ingram 1909, Seys 1933 and 1936), and the area received protection as a National Nature Reserve, the She Dao–Laotie Shan NNR that has a total area 178,073 hectares in 1980. There have been a series of ringing stations in the reserve for at least a decade, and possibly significantly longer.

However the fact that there is a naval base in the port city of Lushun (Lüshun or Lvshun) meant that foreigners have not been allowed to visit the southernmost tip of the Liaodong Peninsula for a long time (perhaps even since the Communist Party came to power in 1949). This situation changed very recently and foreigners are now allowed back to Lushun and beyond, even right to Laotie Shan, the province's southern tip.

Tom Beeke, a Canadian school teacher based at Jinshitan, was the first to advise (via his regular postings on the BirdForum website <http://www.birdforum.net/forumdisplay.php?f=544>) of the opening of the Laotie Shan area and he made several visits in autumn 2010. Beijing based British birder Terry Townshend picked up on this and visited Laotie Shan in February 2011 and again, along with Spike Millington for over a week in mid-May 2011. Terry posted his observations on his excellent blog (<http://birdingbeijing.com/>) and produced a very useful report at the end of their trip (Townshend and Millington 2011 – see <http://birdingbeijing.com/2011/05/23/laotieshan-trip-report/>). He also enthused about the area and its birds and soon set about organising an autumn visit. Together with Peter Cawley the three of us headed off from Beijing to Laotie Shan on the 24 September 2011. Terry stayed until the 5 October, Peter until the 7th while I was able to remain until the 16th. We were joined by Tom Beeke for two days (the 1st and 7 October).

This was Peter's first, Paul's third & Terry's fourth visit to Liaoning – but our first together. I'd previously birded in the province in October 2001 and January 2008 (Holt 2001 and Holt 2008)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost I should say thanks to Terry for inviting me along on this great trip and to him and Peter for being such excellent company as well as sharp and knowledgeable birders. Thanks also to Tom Beeke for enthusing about Laotie Shan and its birds, for being instrumental in bringing our trip to fruition and for all the help he gave us during it. Thanks also to Tian Yang (Leighton) and Zhang Jia for help and insights while we were at Laotie Shan, to Professor Zhou and his daughter not least for putting us in touch with Leighton, to Mr Wang of the Snake Island-Laotie Shan NNR for kindly arranged our access to the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station and giving us each a copy of the informative Avifauna of Liaoning Shedaó Laotieshan National Nature Reserve (1980-2010). Zhang Bing and Mr Sun, and the other staff who we met at the ringing station, were also very welcoming and helpful.

Wang Qingyu of chinabirdtours.com booked Paul's domestic flights and his accommodation in Lushun while Richard Lewthwaite supplied Paul with a very useful draft of a Liaoning checklist and gave knowledgeable comments on some of the birds we were seeing. Thank you all.

Tom's already talking about a winter trip (at least his second) to Feng Huang Shan nr Dandong...

ORNITHOLOGICAL HIGHLIGHTS

We recorded 202 species and had such a great time with such excellent birding that it's difficult to single out a small number of highlights however the following surprised and delighted us -

- High counts included 2155 bird-days of Oriental Honey-buzzard with 1035 on our very first day on site, the 24 September;
- 1150 bird-days of Black Kite with birds being seen almost every day with a peak count of 209 on the 7 October;
- 1255 Eurasian Sparrowhawks and a peak count of 283 on the 10 October;
- 248 bird-days of Northern Goshawk with a peak of 64 also on the 10 October;
- 6944 bird-days of Eastern Buzzard with a peak of 3490 on the 12 October;
- 7971 bird-days of Amur Falcon with a peak of 1830 on the 10 October;
- Over 20,000 bird-days of Ashy Minivet with a peak of 7549 on the 28 September;
- 456 bird-days of Yellow-bellied Tit with birds being noted on 20 of the 23 days we were in Liaoning and a peak of 160 on the 5 October;
- Nearly 60,000 bird-days of Red-rumped Swallow with 10,000 being estimated on the 27 September;
- Over 14,000 white-eyes with up to 4500 birds being noted daily while we were in the province;
- Over 1600 bird-days of Black-faced Bunting with a peak of 700 on the 8 October.

Local rarities included:

- 14-bird-days of Black Stork with between 1 and 4 birds on five dates;
- A juvenile Steppe Eagle on the 2 October;
- 2 juvenile Golden Eagles on the 11 October;
- An adult male Lesser Kestrel on the 6 October;
- 70 osculans Eurasian Oystercatchers, a moulting juvenile Pallas's Gull (only the third for Liaoning) and a first year Glaucous Gull at the Biliu river, Pulandian and a single Little Curlew near Pikou, Pulandian all on the 3 October;
- Surprising numbers of both Northern and Asian House Martins;
- Two and one Red-billed Starlings on the 7th & 14 October respectively
- Several early Alpine Accentors with sightings on three dates after the 11 October.

Note that at Laotie Shan a southwest wind is by far the best for raptor migration.

We recorded the following six Globally Threatened species as defined by BirdLife International. EN = Endangered and VU = Vulnerable and the full details of all these are repeated here -

ORIENTAL STORK Ciconia boyciana EN 东方白鹳

(1/23 1 1)

1 juvenile flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. First seen at 07h12 it circled the point for almost 30 minutes before disappearing. (Photographed). (Tom Beeke, Peter Cawley & Paul Holt).

CHINESE EGRET Egretta eulophotes VU 岩鹭

(1/23 3 3)

3 between Jinshitan and Pikou on the 3/10/2011. The first was in the tidal river at the coastal portion of the Jinshitan Sea Farming Ponds, Jinzhouqu in the early morning while the other two were in the tidal Qing Shui river downstream of the steel plant between Daliujia and Jinchang cun, Pulandian, later in the day.

GREATER SPOTTED EAGLE Aquila clanga VU 乌雕

(15/23 7 45)

Given its reluctance to cross large bodies of water this species, possibly more than any other, was difficult to accurately count. Between 45 and 71 bird-days were recorded with between one and seven, but possibly as many as 17, birds being logged on 15 of the 22 days we were at Laotie Shan (26/9 – 16/10/2011).

- 1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 26/9/2011. First seen at 11h45 it slowly drifted south before turning around & heading back north. What was almost certainly the same bird was seen again just over 1.5 hours later at 13h22.
- 1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 29/9/2011. Like the bird of a few days ago it flew south, reached the headland and then promptly turned back north.
- 2 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 30/9/2011. First seen at 13h54 one of them promptly turned back north while the other attempted to fly south and across Bohai Bay. Both birds were photographed.
- 4 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 1/10/2011. The first bird appeared at 10h17 and headed almost straight out over the bay, the second appeared just 11 minutes later & soon turned back north while the third and fourth were together, appeared at 13h01, and only circled for a very short time before returning back north. The first two birds were photographed.
- 1 juvenile circled the point at Laotie Shan, Lushun 11h18 on 2/10/2011. It soon turned back north.
- 2 separate juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 4/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h29 & the second bird had a damaged leg and was first seen at 10h16. Neither off them flew out to sea.
- 2-6 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 6/10/2011. It was difficult to decide whether I was seeing the same two birds repeatedly or whether six different individuals were involved. Nevertheless two birds were logged at 08h25, one at 11h11, another at 11h44 & two juveniles again at 14h20.
- 5-11 birds flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first sighting was of five birds (four juveniles and one slightly older bird) that flew south at 11h38, the second sighting was of four juveniles that did the same at 12h27, another juvenile flew south at 13h10 while the final bird flew south at 15h24. It was again difficult to determine whether we were seeing the same birds or not and although we didn't see a single one of them return north it seems unlikely that we saw 11 different individuals.
- 1 immature flew north near the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 10h18 on the 9/10/2011.
- 7-17 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. All sightings as follows – a juvenile flew south at 06h03 (just five minutes after official sunrise) & was later seen to turn back north; an immature at 07h01; a juvenile at 07h05; three birds (two immatures and a juvenile) at 07h20; a juvenile at 07h51 & a different juvenile at 07h58; three juveniles at 09h38; five juveniles at 10h10. The only bird of the afternoon was a single juvenile at 13h49. None were actually seen to head purposefully out to sea and quite a few were watched turning back north. As a minimum there were seven birds (five juveniles that were seen together & two immatures) while as a maximum there were 17 different sightings (but no doubt some duplication)
- 7-12 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. Birds were seen as follows – an adult at 07h54 with an additional adult at 08h15; 5 (four juveniles and an immature) at 09h24; a juvenile at 10h56; a juvenile at 11h13 finally 2 birds (a juvenile & an immature) came in off the sea at 13h39.
- 2 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 07h57 on the 12/10/2011.
- 3 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. One, two or three juveniles were seen on three occasions – 3 at 09h25, 1 at 12h20 & 2 at 14h13.
- 1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 07h25 on the 15/10/2011.
- 2 or 3 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 16/10/2011. The first was seen at 06h45, the second at 07h02 and that bird was joined by another at 07h10.

EASTERN CURLEW Numenius madagascariensis VU 大杓鹬

(1/23 72 72)

- 72 between Jinshitan, Pikou and north towards Zhuanghe on the 3/10/2011. The first two were in the tidal Qing Shui riverdownstream of the steel plant between Daliujia and Jinchang cun, Pulandian; 30 near the Biliu river mouth, Pulandian; 38 at a high tide roost between Zhang Zui Yu Ye & Zhang Xia Wang, Pulandian and two more at a similar high tide roost north of Zhang Xia Wang, Pulandian.

GREAT KNOT Calidris tenuirostris VU 大滨鹬

(1/23 40 40)

- 40 at a high tide roost between Zhang Zui Yu Ye & Zhang Xia Wang, Pulandian on the 3/10/2011.

YELLOW-BREASTED BUNTING Emberiza aureola VU 黄胸鹀

(2/23 2 3)

- 2 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 25/9/2011.
- 1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.

We also recorded the following six Near Threatened species – Japanese Quail, Falcated Duck, Black-tailed Godwit, Eurasian Curlew, Marsh Grassbird and Ochre-rumped Bunting.

DAILY DIARY

Saturday 24 September 2011. Flew Beijing to Dalian & drove to Lushun. Afternoon Laotie Shan.

My heavily discounted (400 yuan) China Southern flight was scheduled to leave Beijing at 07h30 – and it pulled away from the gate just five minutes later than that, but as now seems the norm at Beijing Capital Airport (the world's second busiest airport) there were delays on the tarmac and we didn't actually take off for almost another hour. The flight due east to Dalian at the southern end of the Liaodong Peninsula took exactly 58 minutes and, once there I had breakfast at the KFC inside the terminal, before taking a taxi south to Lushun. The latter cost 130 yuan (just as the hotel staff had told me it would) and it took about 50 minutes to reach the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian (New Era Grand Hotel) in Lushun. I checked in, unpacked my birding gear and soon headed out again...

Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian (New Era Grand Hotel), 19 Tongting Street, Lushun, Dalian 116041. Tel. 0411 86369222 and fax 86369948. My room in this decent three star hotel cost 220 yuan/night and had an en suite bathroom with western toilet and shower with 24 hours hot water, a kettle, TV, free internet and two single beds.

I easily secured another taxi on the main highway between the hotel and the naval port and took this to the lighthouse at Laotie Shan. Just as Terry Townshend had told me that trip took about 25 minutes and cost 40 yuan. Once there I paid my 20 yuan entrance fee and wandered slowly up the well-paved track through light woodland to the lighthouse. It was obvious, even from the car park, that there were large numbers of raptors moving and I made rapid progress up to the lighthouse where I found a superb vantage point. Arriving at about 12h10 I spent much of the rest of the afternoon there – raptor watching from the viewing area to the rear of the coast guard station.

Terry Townshend and Peter Cawley arrived at the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian (New Era Grand Hotel) at about 19h30, Peter having flown in to Beijing from the UK earlier that same day.

Terry's May 2011 report contains a useful hand-drawn map of the Laotie Shan area, as well as photographs that show the habitat and some scenery.

The small fishing harbour at Chen Jia cun is close to the Lighthouse and the southern tip of the peninsula.

The next village in from the point, and the one close to the first reservoir, is Gang Jia cun.

Probably about the third village in from the point is Xiao Dong Gou and the ringing station that we were granted access to is near here. Note that access to this site must be arranged before visiting – do NOT expect to be welcomed if you turn up uninvited. Mr Wang of the Snake Island Laotie Shan NNR was kind enough to arrange access for us (prompted by Leighton and Zhang Jia). Mr Wang also gave each of us a copy of an interesting publication on the park - Anon. (2010). The Avifauna of Liaoning Sheda Laotie Shan National Nature Reserve (1980-2010). Liaoning Sheda Laotie Shan NNR Conservation Station. This small book included an annotated checklist of the birds of the park.

About halfway between the end of the road at Laotie Shan and Tieshan zhen is the new settlement of Yang Jia cun. There's a large complex of modern, high-rise apartment buildings here.

Tieshan zhen is the small town where the bus back from Laotie Shan terminates.

Tidal mudflats viewed from the small park besides the Naval Port right on the edge of Lushun.

150 metres up the Lighthouse access road there's a small zoo (with rabbits, peacocks and Golden Pheasants but little else) off to the right. There's a path right through the fenced compound – and this leads out of the back to the lower lighthouse buildings and the sea watching site can also be accessed this way. The main archway in to the Lighthouse compound is another 100 metres further up above the zoo – the gates here aren't always locked but apparently should be from 17h00 – 08h00. Strictly speaking there's only tourist access to the area immediately around the Lighthouse and the two lower platforms where the boundary between Bohai Bay and the yellow sea is a famous tourist attraction.

Note that the Lighthouse apparently stands on the site of a French Longhouse build towards the end of the colonial era in China at the very end of the 19th century.

The areas that we birded were mostly in the She Dao–Laotie Shan National Nature Reserve – a reserve that has a total area 178,073 hectares and was established in 1980 and contains two separate Important Bird Areas (IBA). The relevant paragraphs from BirdLife International (2009) Directory of Important Bird Areas in China (Mainland): Key Sites for Conservation. Cambridge, UK: BirdLife International (English language edition) are repeated below -

The first IBA is She Dao (literally 'Snake Island') - IBA no. CN056.

CRITERIA: A1 A4i

AREA: 73 ha

COORDINATES: 38°58'N 120°59'E

ALTITUDE: 0-210 m

GENERAL DESCRIPTION: She Dao is a small island in the Gulf of Bohai, c.7 nautical miles from the mainland, which is located 30 km north-west of Laotie Shan. The island is rocky and hilly with c.70% vegetation cover, and it is famous for its population of vipers [these are apparently Pallas's Pit Vipers].

THREATENED SPECIES: Chinese Egret (VU, 30 pairs were found in the 1980s), Greater Spotted Eagle (VU)

CONGREGATORY WATERBIRDS: Larus crassirostris (tens of thousands of birds estimated in 1999)

IMPORTANCE TO OTHER FAUNA AND FLORA: Snake Island supports an estimated population of 18,000 vipers!

The second IBA is Laotie Shan itself - IBA no. CN058.

CRITERIA: A1 A4i

AREA: About 17,000 ha

COORDINATES: 38°46'N 121°11'E

ALTITUDE: 5-456 m

CONSERVATION STATUS: The IBA is protected within She Dao–Laotie Shan National Nature Reserve (total area 178,073 ha), which was established in 1980.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION: Located at the southern tip of the Liaodong Peninsula, west of Port Lüshun, Dalian City. The landscape is typical of the Liaodong Peninsular, hilly with a central lowland area surrounded by higher hills. There are villages, salt pans, rivers and reservoirs, and most of the forest in the IBA is forestry plantation or secondary. This is an important stop-over area for migratory birds, which pass through the IBA in millions annually.

THREATENED SPECIES: Oriental Stork (EN), Japanese Crane (EN), Chinese Egret (VU), Baikal Teal (then VU), Baer's Pochard (VU), Steller's Sea Eagle (VU), Greater Spotted Eagle (VU), Eastern Imperial Eagle (VU), White-naped Crane (VU) and Great Bustard (VU).

CONGREGATORY WATERBIRDS: Chinese Egret (about 100 birds occur on spring and autumn migration)

IMPORTANCE TO OTHER FAUNA AND FLORA: No information.

Elsewhere there are reservoirs closer to Dalian – one apparently at Xi Shan and the other at Huangni Chuan, Dalian Nanlu.

Weather

A nice day. 28°C at Laotie Shan at 14h45.

Common Pheasant	3singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Osprey	2, an adult & a separate juvenile, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Oriental Honey-buzzard	1035 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Black Kite	47 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011. Birds were seen in flocks of five, five, 14 and 23.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	4 singles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	41 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Northern Goshawk	4 widely separate juveniles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Common Kestrel	6 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Amur Falcon	25, including at least five adult males, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Eurasian Hobby	17 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011. Just nine birds were seen well enough to age and this produced 4 juveniles and 5 adults.
Peregrine Falcon	2, possibly 4, adults at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Black-headed Gull	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Black-tailed Gull	20 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
'Herring Gull Assemblage'	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Spotted Dove	1 near the Lighthouse at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
cuckoo sp.	1 juvenile flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
White-throated Needletail	7 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011. Three birds flew south at 14h39 while the other four did the same at 15h04.
Ashy Minivet	589 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011. Flocks of between seven & 90 birds were a major feature of the day. Probably a record count for China – but today afternoon's figures were soon surpassed.
Common Magpie	150 between Dalian, Lushun & Laotie Shan on the 24/9/2011.
Japanese Tit	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Light-vented Bulbul	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Sand Martin	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Barn Swallow	250 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Northern House Martin	11, seven singles and two pairs, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	1340 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Dusky Warbler	2 were heard at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Yellow-browed Warbler	4 were heard at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Lanceolated Warbler	1 was heard near the Lighthouse at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
White-eye sp.	10 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Common [Chinese] Blackbird	1 male on a roadside wire midway between Laotie Shan and Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Siberian Rubythroat	1 was heard at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Asian Brown Flycatcher	1 near the Lighthouse at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Eurasian Tree Sparrow	5 between Dalian, Lushun & Laotie Shan on the 24/9/2011.
Eastern Yellow Wagtail	5 over the Lighthouse at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.
Grey Wagtail	2 singles over the Lighthouse at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011.

Sunday 25 September 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

Our taxi driver, Mr Xing (mobile 13084192682), arrived at 05h10 and the three of us (Terry, Peter and me) headed out at 05h15. It took us just over 20 minutes to drive to the entrance gate to the lighthouse complex at Laotie Shan where we dismissed the vehicle. The park doesn't open until 08h00, there's a large fence around it and unfortunately positively no access until that time. Consequently we spent much of the early morning watching the impressive visible migration from the clearing immediately in front to the large ornamental gates about 300 metres above the car park.

After almost two hours here we headed off and into the woodland. We walked about 1.3 kilometres up to another viewpoint, one that Terry had spent time at during the visit he and Spike Millington made in May 2011. There were about a dozen Chinese bird photographers present at this second site – most were from Dalian with at least one from Shenyang.

We spent several hours here before returning to the main car park, where we had some drinks from the stall and bought our entrance tickets. We then wandered up to the viewing area to the rear of the Lighthouse – the same site that I'd spent much of the previous afternoon at. Leaving here at 16h20 we headed back down to the gate only to discover that the buses back to Lushun left the turning area on the main road at 11h00, 12h40, 14h30, 16h30 and 17h30. It was already too late to catch the 16h30 bus so we had some more drinks and pottered slowly down to the main road. The bus back towards Lushun costs just one yuan/person – but note that no change is given. We rode it all the way to the terminus in Tieshan zhen, a modest sized settlement about three or four kilometres before Lushun town centre. The bus took about 20 minutes. We had dinner here before taking a taxi, for about 15 yuan, back to the hotel.

Weather

Another nice day. 20°C outside our hotel in Lushun at 04h55 rising to 27°C at Laotie Shan in the mid-afternoon. While there was little wind in the early morning this strengthened during the morning to a modest southerly onshore breeze midday but faded again late afternoon.

Common Pheasant	3 singles were heard in the woodland around the southern tip of the Laotie Shan on the 25/9/2011.
Black Stork	3, two juveniles & an adult, over Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 25/9/2011. First seen at 06h15, just 30 minutes after official sunrise, they were seen several times in among various parties of Oriental Honey-buzzards and Black Kites around the tip of the peninsula for the following two hours.

Monday 26 September 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

We left the Xin Jiyuan Dajjudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi 15 minutes earlier than yesterday at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan (Laotie Shan Dengta Ting Che Chang). We spent the rest of the day there – Terry returned to the hotel mid-afternoon (catching the 14h30 bus back) while Peter and me stayed for another three hours catching the 17h30 bus back. The three of us had dinner together in a restaurant in Lushun town centre.

We again spent the early morning (05h30-10h15) on the road above the main car park - standing immediately in front of the locked gates in to the Lighthouse compound. This site is fairly open and affords reasonable views of the early morning visible migration. It would of course be better to head straight up to the Lighthouse – but the gate's locked until 08h00.

Highlights today included – our first harriers with one Eastern Marsh and nine Pied, a juvenile Greater Spotted Eagle and over 1870 Red-rumped Swallows.

Weather

Another glorious day. It was slightly cooler in the early morning – being 18°C outside our hotel in Lushun at 04h55, this dropped to 16°C at the watch point at sunrise almost one hour later (05h40). It was also slightly more humid in the early morning – but was again very clear with the early morning light dew soon burning off. The temperature then climbed rapidly to 29°C mid-afternoon. There was little wind in the early morning – and indeed throughout much of the day.

Tuesday 27 September 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

We left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. Arriving 20 minutes later we immediately walked up to the watch point in front of the main park gates. Arriving there at 05h25 we spent the rest of the day at the southern tip of Laotie Shan, birded until 17h00 and caught the 17h30 bus back towards Lushun.

Highlights today included – a modest movement of Pied Harriers and accipiters, our first Eurasian Collared Dove, seven White-throated Needletails and a similar number of Fork-tailed Swifts, a Hair-crested Drongo, our first Chinese Penduline Tit and Eurasian Sklyarks, 15 Northern and two Asian House Martins, 10,000 Red-rumped Swallows, one Manchurian Bush and one Two-barred Warbler.

Weather

Another glorious day. It was slightly cooler in the early morning – being 17°C at the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h25 (not long before sunrise). Like yesterday it was slightly humid in the early morning – but was again clear with the early morning light dew soon burning off. Temperatures climbed fairly rapidly to 25°C at the Lighthouse watch point by 12h30 but had dropped back to 19°C there as we left at 17h00. With the increasingly strong south-south-easterly wind it felt much cooler in the later afternoon than this 19°C.

Common Pheasant	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 27/9/2011.
Black Stork	1 juvenile came in off the sea & promptly flew north at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 12h41 on the 27/9/2011.

We left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. We spent the rest of the day there and were joined by Tom Beeke and three of his colleagues for much of the day. Most of us spent the morning at the 'helipad watch point', Tom and me remained until 16h00 while everyone else spent the afternoon scouring the woods and gullies. Terry, Peter and me caught the 17h30 bus back towards Lushun while Tom and his team drove back up to Jinshitan.

Weather

Another decent day. It was just 10°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at sunrise almost one hour later (05h40). The temperature slowly rose to a maximum of only about 21°C mid-afternoon. There was little wind and it was fairly clear in the early morning but the cloud cover had increased to about 7/8 by 12h30 and the wind had started to pick up.

Sunday 2 October 2011. Most of the day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

We left the Xin Jiuyan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. Tom Beeke's regular driver met us near the car park at Laotie Shan at about 15h45 and the four of us returned to the hotel where we picked up some extra gear before heading up to Tom's house at Jinshitan. The drive via the expressway took about 1.5 hours and cost 330 yuan (110 yuan each) including the tolls.

Weather

A gorgeous day – cool but with excellent long-range visibility. It was again 10°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at sunrise (about 05h40). The temperature slowly rose to a maximum of only about 17°C early afternoon but it felt significantly colder in the strong wind. There was little wind in the early morning but it soon picked up and a strong north-westerly was blowing by 09h15. This wind continued until we left Laotie Shan in the late afternoon and consequently what few raptors there were were moving very high.

Monday 3 October 2011. Most of the day in the Jinshitan – Pikou area.

We left our hotel in central Jinshitan at 05h15 with Tom driving and Terry, Peter and me riding as passengers, We spent the entire day birding at a number of sites that Tom knew (& knew extremely well) between Jinshitan, Pikou and on north towards Zhuanghe. We returned to Jinshitan in the early evening, said goodbye to Tom and headed back to Lushun in another vehicle.

During the day we met Professor Zhou (from Shenyang) and his family. Prof. Zhou had been instrumental in helping reduce bird catching at Laotie Shan. He was based there for the three years 2007-2009 and told us that large raptors (presumably Oriental Honey-buzzards) were then priced at 100 yuan each and small raptors over 20 yuan each and that over 4000 raptors used to be caught each year.

The first Oriental Honey-buzzard of 2011 apparently occurred on the 2 September & they peak in middle of that month.

Weather

There was absolutely no cloud, a very light dew and it was just 7°C outside our hotel in Jinshitan at 05h10. The day remained immaculately clear and temperatures rose to about 23°C. There was rather little wind all day.

Hotel in Jinshitan, Jinzhouqu. (39°05.4'N., 122°00.9'E.). 05h05-05h15.

I spent about ten minutes outside the hotel before dawn & heard a small number of birds including –

Little Owl	1
Olive-backed Pipit	3
Black-faced Bunting	2

Site 2. Jinshitan Coastal Geopark, Jinzhouqu. (39°04.1'N., 122°02.8'E.). 05h25-06h05.

One of Tom's favourite birding sites – and one that is a regular wintering site for both Pallas's & Long-tailed Rosefinches. Daurian Jackdaw is fairly regular here and it has produced up to four Varied Tits in winter. Beijing right on the coast today it yielded quite a few visible migrants as well as Peter's target species of Blue Rock-thrush & Chinese Hill Babbler. It's a gorgeous, very attractively laid out park with boardwalks, bi-lingual signs and a myriad of other items. Today we drove to the car park at the very end of the coastal road and spent 40 minutes birding from the boardwalk – looking out over the sea as well as in the coastal gardens and scrub and it wasn't long before we found our primary target – a Blue Rock Thrush.

Site 3. Jinshitan Sea Farming Ponds (coastal), Jinzhouqu. (39°07.5'N., 122°01.9'E.). 06h20-06h40.

Another of Tom's regular sites and today we explored two parts of this, soon to be reclaimed sprawling, area. The first, a near coastal tidal river surrounded by fishponds (or ponds where sea cucumbers are farmed according to Tom), produced our first Chinese Egret as well as a fly-over Osprey.

Site 4. Jinshitan Sea Farming Ponds (inland), Jinzhouqu. (39°04.1'N., 122°02.8'E.). 06h45-08h05.

The second portion of the same, extensive sea farming pond complex was a five minute drive inland from the previous site. The attractions here were the numerous reed-fringed ponds. Tom had seen, and photographed, a female Watercock with tiny, flightless chicks here only a month earlier, and we were hoping to be able to see at least one of these today. We didn't but the pools and reed beds held an impressive variety of other birds. Unfortunately a new road right through the marsh was nearing completion with a dozen or so workmen and heavy machinery hard at work. Highlights here included a modest number of ducks including a fly-by Baikal Teal, our only Intermediate Egret of our entire time in Liaoning, a fine Baillon's Crake, a juvenile Whiskered Tern, a distant Chinese Grey Shrike, ten Chinese Penduline Tits (they breed here according to Tom), two lingering Oriental and ten Black-browed Reed Warblers (both also breed here), a Bluethroat and the only Common Reed Bunting of our time in Liaoning.

Site 12. Biliu river bridge & river mouth, Pulandian. (39°28.6'N., 122°34.2'E.). 14h10-16h45.

This site, about 500 metres inland from the river mouth, is close the village of Wenjia cun. A large sand bank upstream of the new road bridge remains exposed and is a high tide roost site for large numbers of shorebirds and gulls. We first viewed the roosting birds from the southbound carriageway on the bridge, subsequently accessed the southern shore at the river mouth and eventually found access to the small fishing harbour about 500 metres upstream from the bridge. The latter site would have afforded closer views of the roosting gulls at high tide – but by the time we were there the tide had dropped and the roosting birds had mostly dissipated.

Tuesday 4 October 2011. Most of the day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

We left the Xin Ji Yuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. We spent just one hour (05h30-06h30) watching the visible passerine passage before deciding to head up to the large concrete raptor viewpoint. Arriving at the latter site at 07h00 we stayed until 11h00 when we were forced to leave by some military gents. Chinese birders can watch the migration at this superb site but foreigners cannot!

While at this viewpoint we met a group of Beijing birders including Zhong Jia, chairwoman of the Beijing Bird Society, and Tian Yang (Leighton) a fluent English speaking young guy who I'd first met in Dongang, Shandong in October 2010. Leighton (email: Leighton.tian@hilton.com or dbjsty@yahoo.com.cn) works for the Hilton hotel group and speaks fluent English. They were staying at a hotel closer to the end of the peninsula at Laotie Shan than the one we were using in Lushun. Theirs was the Guo Jia Huan Jing Baohu Ku Pu Jidi Jiedai Zhong Xin and the owner is a Mr Xu Zhen Long (mobile 18940852805). Simple rooms with three beds cost about 140 yuan/night but they don't have en suite facilities. There were four better rooms in the hotel and all four of these had one large bed in each, en suite facilities with a shower and western toilet and these cost 198 yuan/night. The hotel has a simple restaurant.

Leighton introduced us to Mr Wang – a guy perhaps in his early 30s who was the chief research officer at the Laotie Shan Protection Station. Mr Wang couldn't speak English and struck me as a novice birder – despite being the person responsible for counting passing migrants at the site! True to form the nature reserve was poorly funded and the staff ill trained and no-doubt poorly paid. Nevertheless they were friendly – and Mr Wang took us to a couple of sites between Laotie Shan and Lushun – the first was called Bohanzi (Bo Han Zi) and was a complex of fish or shrimp ponds at the far end of the large tidal inlet at Lushun. Here there were modest numbers of gulls (145 Mongolian and three Common) as well as a single Great and Little Egrets. After just 15 minutes here we drove to the other site – the one near the roadside naval base not far from our hotel where Terry, Peter and me had scanned the tidal mudflats a few days earlier. It was high tide when we arrived today and consequently we saw rather little here...

After about 25 minutes here we were headed back to Leighton's hotel – the Guo Jia Huan Jing Baohu Ku Pu Jidi Jiedai Zhong Xin and spent the last 1.5 hours birding from the garden. There was an impressive passage of Grey-faced Buzzards and especially Amur Falcons that evening and we spent most of our time watching these.

Weather

Another very nice day – slightly warmer than yesterday but with poorer long range visibility. It was 15°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h35 and close to dawn (sunrise today was at 05h52 with sun set at 17h36). Initially a little bit cloudy (3/8) this soon broke up. Very light wind in the early morning but this soon strengthened albeit only slightly and remained west-south-west for the rest of the day. The temperature rose gradually to a maximum of only about 17°C by 07h45 and remained about that until at least the late afternoon.

Wednesday 5 October 2011. Most of the day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

We left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. We spent just one hour (05h30-06h30) watching the visible passerine passage before joining Mr Wang of the reserve protection station and heading off to the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station. We spent most of the rest of the day there with Terry and Peter climbing a nearby hill to watch raptor migration in the afternoon. Mr Wang kindly took us back to our hotel in Lushun in the late afternoon.

The ringing station was not especially easy to find. It was apparently the southernmost of the eight stations operated by the Laotie Shan Protection Station and was accessed by turning left (east) and uphill off the main Lushun to Laotie Shan road about 20 metres to the north (Lushun side) of the Xiao Dong Gou line of roadside restaurants. After 50 metres take the first right on to a smaller concrete road. 30 metres up there this becomes an unpaved dirt track. We drove up about another one kilometre – to a small prefabricated hut that was the temporary ringing station. This station is operated from 20 August – 20 November and is manned by two staff.

Mr Wang dropped us off at the ringing station where we spent much of the rest of the day together with Zhang Bing – a reserve worker who'd graduated from Harbin Forestry University and had been working in the Laotie Shan reserve for just two months. Zhang Bing was a fabulously friendly, helpful and enthusiastic young guy and spoke excellent English. (Mobile 13478734168 and email: zhangbing19880207@163.com). The ringing station was operated by a Mr Sun – Uncle Sun as Zhang Bing called him.

We also met two keen bird photographers from Shenyang who told me that the Siberian Cranes there were usually present between 15-30 October and that there were up to 3000 of them as well as more than 20,000 ducks. Mr Liu (mobile 15309868686) was the senior of the two gents while Mr Wang (15802492288) the other gent was rather quiet.

Terry flew back to Beijing that evening.

Weather

A changeable day – very slightly warmer than yesterday but with several rain showers in the late morning – early afternoon and with even poorer long range visibility. It was 16°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h40 and close to sunrise (today at 05h53 with sun set at 17h35). It was initially cloudy (6/8) but this broke up very soon but long range visibility remained poor throughout the day. The wind was southwest throughout the day but of varying intensity – in the early morning there was a fairly strong wind. It started to rain at about 08h45 and did so, on and off, for about the following two hours. Today's maximum temperature was just 19°C at 15h00.

Weather

Another very nice day – and much better long range visibility than yesterday. It was 11°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h35, there was no cloud cover and only a very light west-north-west wind though this had backed slightly to a north-westerly by 14h00. The temperature slowly rose to 20°C by 10h40 and remained about that for much of the day, dropping to 16°C at 16h00 but rising again to 17°C one hour later.

Friday 7 October 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

Peter and me left the Xin Jiyuan Dajjudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h10 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. Tom Beeke arrived at about 05h45 and the three of us spent about three hours (05h30-08h30) watching the visible passerine passage before we split up. Peter spent the afternoon birding the trail around the point while Tom and me took the 09h00 bus to Xiao Dong Gou and walked from there to the ringing station. We both stayed there until after lunch and left at about 13h30 taking a three-wheeler vehicle back to the point. All three of us spent the last 1.5 hours (15h30 – 17h00) watching the visible migration from the usual site just short of the Lighthouse Car Park. We all left on the 17h30 bus, Tom then took a taxi back to his in-law's house in Lushun while Peter and me had dinner before taking another taxi back to the Xin Jiyuan Grand Hotel. Peter left for Dalian airport at 19h30 and flew back to Beijing later that evening.

Weather

Another very nice day – and reasonable long range visibility. It was again 11°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h35, there was no cloud cover and only a very light north-west wind.

Japanese Quail NT	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011 (Peter Cawley).
Common Pheasant	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Oriental Stork EN	1 first year bird flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. First seen at 07h12 it circled the point for almost 30 minutes before disappearing. (Photographed).
Chinese Pond Heron	1 first-winter flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Oriental Honey-buzzard	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Black Kite	209 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first three birds were seen at 06h23 & at 06h40 the largest flock of the autumn (125 birds) passed south. Birds were seen in parties of the following sizes – 1, 2, 2, 3, 3, 4, 7, 27, 35 & 125. A sample count of 33 birds in the largest flock yielded 25 juveniles and just eight adults.
Eastern Marsh Harrier	2 separate juveniles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.

Japanese Sparrowhawk	2 singles, one of which was trapped at the ringing station, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	26 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 05h47.
Northern Goshawk	7, two adults & five juveniles, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first bird, a juvenile, was seen at 05h56.
Grey-faced Buzzard	27 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. Birds were seen in parties of 1, 1, 4, 4, 6 & 11.
Eastern Buzzard	39 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 05h53.
Greater Spotted Eagle VU	5-11 birds flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first sighting was of five birds (four juveniles and one slightly older bird) that flew south at 11h38, the second sighting was of four juveniles that did the same at 12h27, another juvenile flew south at 13h10 while the final bird flew south at 15h24. It's difficult to determine whether we were seeing the same birds or not and although we didn't see a single one of them return north it seems unlikely, given the species' reluctance to cross large bodies of water, that we saw 11 different individuals.
Common Kestrel	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Amur Falcon	1200 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 05h47 but very few (just 11 individuals!) were seen before 15h45 when a flock of over 1000 birds arrived from the north. Just over 200 of these seemed to head out to see but they quite probably all came back and joined the 800 or so that were milling around the point. They all remained in this same area until we left at 17h30 and were probably going to roost somewhere near the end of the Peninsula.
Eurasian Hobby	4 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Peregrine Falcon	3 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Black-headed Gull	1 over the sea at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Black-tailed Gull	2 in the small fishing harbour at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
'Herring Gull Assemblage'	5 over the sea at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Oriental Turtle Dove	25 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Spotted Dove	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Ashy Minivet	304 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Tiger Shrike	1 first-winter was seen briefly at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Bull-headed Shrike	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Brown Shrike	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011 (Peter Cawley).
Common Magpie	150 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Daurian Jackdaw	1 first-winter, the same bird as yesterday, was seen repeatedly at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. It was again being severely harassed by several Common Magpies.
Yellow-bellied Tit	14 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. Birds were seen in parties of 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 2 & 5.
Japanese Tit	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Chinese Penduline Tit	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Eurasian Skylark	7 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Light-vented Bulbul	7 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first four birds were seen at 07h08 and there were subsequently three singles.
Barn Swallow	100 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	2500 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Manchurian Bush Warbler	1 near the ringing station at Xiao Dong Gou, Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Dusky Warbler	8 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Radde's Warbler	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.

Chestnut Bunting	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
Black-faced Bunting	35 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.

Saturday 8 October 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. I spent about 3 hours (05h30-08h30) watching the visible passerine passage before taking the 09h00 bus to Xiao Dong Gou and walking from there to the ringing station. I stayed there until after lunch and left at about 13h30 walking slowly back towards the point. I caught the 16h30 bus back towards Lushun.

Weather

A poor day weather-wise – it was foggy in the morning and, while this lifted a bit, it never really cleared all day. It wasn't until 07h36 that I had my first view of the sun. It was 15°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h30 and only the lightest of northerly winds.

Common Pheasant station.	11 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. A group of seven male were seen at the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station.
Mandarin Duck	2 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. They were both on the first roadside reservoir back from the point.
Little Grebe	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. The first flew low past the watch point at 05h58 while the other was on the second roadside reservoir back from the point later in the day.
Purple Heron	1 flew over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 05h41 on the 8/10/2011.
Oriental Honey-buzzard	4 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.
Black Kite	58 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. The first three birds were seen at 06h12 & flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 3, 7, 17 & 28. The flock of 17, the last of the day, were first seen at 16h32 and were still around the point area almost one hour later at 16h25. They appeared as if they were planning to roost nearby.
Eastern Marsh Harrier	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. The first was seen at 06h26.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. One of these was trapped at the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	38 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. The first was seen at 06h53.
Northern Goshawk	10, one adult & five juveniles, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.

Eastern Buzzard	52 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.
Common Kestrel	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. The first was seen at 06h47.
Amur Falcon	971 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. After the impressive pre-roost gathering near the point yesterday evening I expected to see large numbers of Amurs around the point in the early morning – but there were only a few (159) and its likely that the fog prevented me seeing most of them as they left their roost. However there was a modest southerly movement in the early afternoon – and I counted 783 over the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station in the two hours after 12h30.
Eurasian Hobby	16 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.
Peregrine Falcon	1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.

Light-vented Bulbul	14 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.
Barn Swallow	240 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	3620 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. There was a modest southerly movement all day but this picked up between 13h00 & 14h00 during and I counted 1900 birds during that hour alone.
Dusky Warbler	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.
Radde's Warbler	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.

Pallas's Bunting	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011.

Sunday 9 October 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

My itinerary was much as yesterday - I left the Xin Ji Yuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h00 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park. I spent about three hours (05h30-08h30) watching the visible passerine passage before taking the 09h00 bus to Xiao Dong Gou and walking from there to the ringing station. I stayed there until after lunch and left with the crew at about 14h00. I walked back down to the main road and then on towards the Lighthouse. After walking for less than 15 minutes I was stopped by a rather surly man driving an unmarked van. It soon transpired that he was a police officer – but one not wearing a uniform. Somewhat aggressively he demanded to know what I was doing, where I'd come from and where I was going. He demanded to see my passport, but couldn't read it, and spent several minutes studying an old Indian visa in it before I asked for it back. He told me that foreigners were not allowed on this road – which was nonsense as this is the main road linking Lushun town with the Lighthouse. After ten minutes of him shouting at me from two feet in front of my face I walked away. He immediately got on his phone and, about five minutes later, drove up to me again. His mood had changed radically and he now offered me a ride to the Lighthouse! I took it and gave thanks. Once there he asked, politely this time, to see my passport again, and photographed the document page with the camera on his mobile phone. After this he told the ticket office girls that he was going to follow me until I caught the 17h30 bus back to Lushun. I then called Qingyu, spoke with her before passing the phone to him. Whatever she said to him had the desired effect since seconds later he drove away! I spent the rest of the afternoon birding in the car park-Lighthouse area before catching the 17h30 bus back to Tieshan zhen.

Weather

Another rather disappointing day with yesterday's fog having dispersed only slightly – now being a fairly thick mist that lasted all day and in fact became denser in the evening. There was an extremely light west-north-west wind and it was again 15°C near the watch point at 05h35 and 18°C there at 17h00.

Common Pheasant	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Great Cormorant	3, one adult and two immatures, flew over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 16h12 on the 9/10/2011.
Black Kite	23 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. The first eight birds were at 06h32 & birds were seen in parties of 1, 1, 2, 8 & 11.
Eastern Marsh Harrier	2 together over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun shortly before dusk on the 9/10/2011.
Pied Harrier	3 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. The first was at 06h10.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. It flew south at 05h59.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	36 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Northern Goshawk	5, two adults & three juveniles, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.

Grey-faced Buzzard	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. The first was at 06h26 & birds were seen in parties of 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 2 & 2.
Eastern Buzzard	86 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. The first two birds were seen at 06h05.
Greater Spotted Eagle VU	1 immature flew north near the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 10h18 on the 9/10/2011.
Common Kestrel	3 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Amur Falcon	606 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. Most of these (544 birds) were seen heading south from the watch point in the early morning with decent passage starting at 06h08 and lasting just over one hour. Only a small number of birds were present in that area in the evening.
Eurasian Hobby	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Peregrine Falcon	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Eurasian Woodcock	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 9/10/2011.
Common Snipe	1 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Black-headed Gull	1 in the fishing harbour at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Black-tailed Gull	10 in the fishing harbour at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
'Herring Gull Assemblage'	3 in the fishing harbour at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Oriental Turtle Dove	11 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Eurasian Collared Dove	1 near the Lighthouse at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Spotted Dove	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Common Kingfisher	1 was heard near the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Ashy Minivet	559 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Common Magpie	100 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Daurian Jackdaw	1 first-winter at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 06h45 on the 9/10/2011. It was very probably the same bird that's been in the area for a couple of days.
Yellow-bellied Tit	52 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. All bar one of these was over the morning watch point and were seen in parties of 1, 1, 1, 18 & 30.
Japanese Tit	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Eurasian Skylark	3 singles over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Light-vented Bulbul	14 flew quite high to the south over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. They returned north about ten minutes later!
Sand Martin	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Barn Swallow	40 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	8000 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. Almost all of these were counted from the morning watch point with birds first appearing in a series of tight flocks as if they were just leaving a roost, from 05h50 onwards. They immediately headed off in a south-westerly direction – and were probably going to cross the bay immediately. Shortly after these tight post roost gatherings had left a marked movement of birds from further afield commenced with a constant stream of swallows passing for another hour when the rate started to slow. Remarkably I saw rather few swallows after about 10h00 but another, and more modest, evening gathering of perhaps 400-500 birds, occurred near the point.
Dusky Warbler	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.

White-eye sp.	300 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
White-cheeked Starling	28 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. Birds were seen in flocks of 8 & 20.
Dusky or Naumann's Thrush	1 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Thrush sp.	2 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Daurian Redstart	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Common Stonechat	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Taiga Flycatcher	1 first-winter near the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Eurasian Tree Sparrow	20 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Eastern Yellow Wagtail	5 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Grey Wagtail	3 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
White Wagtail	70 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. Most of these were between the Lighthouse, the watch point & the bus stop in the evening and were undoubtedly planning to roost somewhere nearby.
Richard's Pipit	2 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Olive-backed Pipit	110 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. The vast majority of these were over the watch point.
Red-throated Pipit	18 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Buff-bellied Pipit	19 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Brambling	3 singles over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Grey-capped Greenfinch	92 near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Common Rosefinch	30 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Red Crossbill	1 was heard flying south over the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 14h02 on the 9/10/2011. According to Mr Sun of the ringing station there had been an influx of crossbills in to the Laotie Shan area about five years earlier (and several were trapped for banding) – but none had been reported there since.
Pine Bunting	1 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Tristram's Bunting	1 was trapped at the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Chestnut-eared Bunting	9 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Little Bunting	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Yellow-throated Bunting	2 near the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011.
Chestnut Bunting	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. One of these was trapped at the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station.

Monday 10 October 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi 15 minutes later than normal at 05h15 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. There were lots of birds moving today – initially passerines but later a decent variety of raptors so I spent the rest of the day between there and the platform to the rear of the Coastguard/Lighthouse compound. I left the Coastguard platform at 15h00, wandered down to the ticket office, bought a drink and had intended to catch the 16h30 bus back. However since I was early I spent a while watching an evening movement of Amur Falcons. This movement gathered pace and I ended up catching the later bus back towards Lushun.

Weather

A nice day – the fog/mist of the last two days had dissipated and there was reasonable long range visibility again with Snake Island, but not Changdao, being visible. It was 15°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h45, there was about 6/8 high cloud cover and a moderate east-north-east wind in the early morning. The pressure remained stable throughout the day with the wind initially backing round to the north by 10h30. This caused the early morning raptor movement to cease but it started again as the wind gradually swung back around and became a southerly by 12h00. The wind veered round to a north-north-westerly by 14h45 but virtually stopped shortly after that. The day's highest temperature was 19°C at 14h45 but it had dropped back to 16°C by the time I caught the bus at 17h30.

Sunrise and sunset on 10 October 2011

Sun rise 05h58

Sun set 17h27

Common Pheasant	4 males at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Mandarin Duck	17 flew south over the sea past the fishing harbour at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 07h31 on the 10/10/2011.
Grey Heron	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. These involved a single juvenile that flew out to sea at 07h10, another single juvenile at 07h34 and a flock of 8 flying high to the south out over the sea at 07h54.
Purple Heron	1 juvenile flew low to the west at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Heron sp.	2 flew very high to the south at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 06h12 on the 10/10/2011.
Osprey	5, three singles and two birds together, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Oriental Honey-buzzard	6 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h51.
Black Kite	113 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first five birds were seen at 06h01 & today was remarkable for the frequency of sighting (with 24 encounters!) and the small sizes of most of the flocks. Flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 2, 3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 4, 5, 5, 7, 13, 20 & 23.
Eastern Marsh Harrier	2 singles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h54.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	5 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	283 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Northern Goshawk	64, including 7 adults and 26 juveniles, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first bird, a juvenile, was seen at 06h08. This is my highest ever day count in China – easily exceeding the 40 birds that I saw at Baiwang Shan, Beijing on 25 October 2010.
Grey-faced Buzzard	23 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h13 & flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 1, 2, 3, 5 & 10.
Eastern Buzzard	251 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first two birds were at 05h53.
Greater Spotted Eagle VU	7-17 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. All sightings as follows – a juvenile flew south at 06h03 (just five minutes after official sunrise) & was later seen to turn back north; an immature at 07h01; a juvenile at 07h05; three birds (two immatures and a juvenile) at 07h20; a juvenile at 07h51 & a different juvenile at 07h58; three juveniles at 09h38; five juveniles at 10h10. The only bird of the afternoon was a single juvenile at 13h49. None were actually seen to head purposefully out to sea and quite a few were watched turning back north. As a minimum there were seven birds (five juveniles that were seen together & two immatures) while as a maximum there were 17 different sightings (but no doubt some duplication)
Common Kestrel	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h13.
Amur Falcon	1830 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The first two birds were not seen until 06h23 – a full 25 minutes after official sunrise but the morning's numbers were unremarkable. Small scale passage started in the late morning but the main event wasn't until the evening. I arrived way too early for the 16h30 bus and was waiting out of the way – about 50 metres back up the road towards the lighthouse and adjacent to the lower road up to the Yihai Manor (an apparently up market guest house that doesn't admit foreigners). A pre-roost movement of Amurs, like the ones we'd seen on a couple of previous occasions already this autumn, was already underway when I arrived at 16h00 & it soon became obvious that this movement was a significant one. Unlike the situation on the evening of the 7 October tonight's gathering was gradual and slow paced allowing ample time to watch and count the birds. It was a windless, clear and still evening with some high cloud cover and all the falcons arrived from the south (!) and crossed the road I was standing on in the same direction (north). The movement was most intense between 16h05-16h25 and stopped almost as suddenly as it had started. Largely over by 16h35 only a small trickle of birds continued to move north after 16h45 with the very last bird being seen at 16h55 (a full half-an-hour before official sunset and 40 & 45 minutes respectively before I saw my last Black Kite & Eurasian Sparrowhawks of the day)! The day count of 1830 is solely of birds in this pre-roost movement with none of those seen heading out to sea earlier in the day being included. Today's count is apparently the highest autumn count anywhere in China, being surpassed by a spring count of 2000 at Honghe, Jinping, Yunnan on 13 May 2009 ( WJ in China Bird Report 2008-2009)

Eurasian Hobby	12 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Peregrine Falcon	4 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Pacific Golden Plover	1 flew high to the south over the fishing harbour at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 10h58 on the 10/10/2011.
Black-headed Gull	3 on the sea off the fishing harbour at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Black-tailed Gull	30 over the sea off Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
'Herring Gull Assemblage'	20 over the sea off Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Oriental Turtle Dove	22 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Spotted Dove	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.

Chinese Grey Shrike	1 near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Common Magpie	200 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. These included a single flock of 155 inside the Lighthouse compound.
Carrion Crow	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. One was seen at 06h28 while three birds (possibly including the original bird?) were seen at 06h37.
Yellow-bellied Tit	79 flew south past the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. Flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 2, 4, 4, 4, 10, 22 & 27.
Japanese Tit	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Chinese Penduline Tit	17 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. Flock sizes were as follows with birds that were only heard & not seen being logged as a singleton – 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 5 & 6.
Eurasian Skylark	7 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Light-vented Bulbul	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Barn Swallow	150 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	3400 in a pre-roost gathering at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. Birds were seen throughout the day (after the first & late bird at 05h57) but numbers increased during the late afternoon and this count was made at about 16h45 (almost 45 minutes before sunset).
Dusky Warbler	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Radde's Warbler	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.

Two-barred Warbler	1 was heard near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Black-browed Reed Warbler	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Lanceolated Warbler	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Zitting Cisticola	2 near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Chinese Hill Babbler	2, a pair, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
White-eye sp.	470 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
White-cheeked Starling	223 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. Most of these flew over the watch point. Flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 9, 12, 13, 17, 20, 21, 30, 30, 30 & 35.
Grey-backed Thrush	1 over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Red-throated Thrush	1 adult male near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Thrush sp.	5 flew high to the south over the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Daurian Redstart	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Common Stonechat	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Taiga Flycatcher	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Eurasian Tree Sparrow	15 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Eastern Yellow Wagtail	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Grey Wagtail	3 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
White Wagtail	60 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. Most of these were in a pre-roost gathering near the bus turning site towards dusk.
Richard's Pipit	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Olive-backed Pipit	44 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Red-throated Pipit	1 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Buff-bellied Pipit	15 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Brambling	9 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Grey-capped Greenfinch	88 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Common Rosefinch	21 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Grosbeak sp.	1 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Pine Bunting	8 over the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Chestnut-eared Bunting	8 near the morning watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.

Yellow-throated Bunting	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Chestnut Bunting	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.
Black-faced Bunting	280 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. The vast majority of these (245 birds) were over the watch point.
Pallas's Bunting	20 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011.

Tuesday 11 October 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun in Mr Xing's taxi at 05h15 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. There were again lots of birds today – initially a modest early morning movement of passerines but later a good movement of Eastern Buzzards. I spent just under the first 3.5 hours (from 05h45-09h00) at the regular watch point before walking up to the Coastguard/Lighthouse compound where I spent much of the rest of the day. I left the Coast guard platform at 15h20, wandered down to the ticket office, bought a drink and caught the 16h30 bus back to Lushun.

Weather

A glorious day with good long range visibility again with Snake Island, but not Changdao, being visible. It was seven degrees cooler than yesterday being just 8°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h45. There was absolutely no cloud cover all day and hardly any wind. It was already 21°C at 10h10, peaked at 24°C at 13h00 but had only dropped back one degree by 15h20.

Daurian Partridge	2 widely separate calling birds were heard from the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. They sounded to be in the fruit orchards on either side of the main valley.
Japanese Quail NT	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Common Pheasant	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Grey goose sp.	3 flew south at 07h41 before turning back north at five minutes later Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Black Stork	3 un-aged, distant birds, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 08h34 on the 11/10/2011.
Oriental Honey-buzzard	3 singles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h04.
Black Kite	12 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. The first five birds were seen at 06h12 & flock sizes were 1, 3, 3 & 5.
Pied Harrier	1 juvenile flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	128 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. The first three birds were seen at 05h44.
Northern Goshawk	23, including five adults & 17 juveniles, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Grey-faced Buzzard	16 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. The first three birds were seen at 06h12 & flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 3 & 11.
Eastern Buzzard	832 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. This is easily my largest ever count in China (but was easily surpassed the following day). The first bird was seen at 05h57. On a couple of occasions, once at around 08h00 & again around 14h00 over 150 Eastern Buzzards were in the air together! Passage tailed off shortly after 14h00 with birds lingering around the point between the Chinese bird photographer's concrete platform and the Lighthouse/Coast Guard station until I left at 14h30. A sample count of 122 birds yielded 17 adults (14 %) & 105 juveniles (86 %).
Greater Spotted Eagle VU	7-12 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. Birds were seen as follows – an adult at 07h54 with an additional adult at 08h15; 5 (four juveniles and an immature) at 09h24; a juvenile at 10h56; a juvenile at 11h13 finally 2 birds (a juvenile & an immature) came in off the sea at 13h39.
Golden Eagle	2 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 07h45, two were seen together at 10h47 & a lone juvenile was the last sighting at 11h24.
Common Kestrel	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Amur Falcon	130 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 05h41. Today's count was a massive, and surprising reduction on the number logged yesterday. Despite the clear skies and lack of wind there were no birds in a pre-roost gathering.
Merlin	1 adult male flew past the coast guard station at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 14h54 on the 11/10/2011.
Eurasian Hobby	4 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.

Lanceolated Warbler	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Marsh Grassbird NT	1 was heard (it gave a typically brief burst of intense song) near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.

Zitting Cisticola	2 again near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Vinous-throated Parrotbill	4 near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Chinese Hill Babbler	2, a pair, near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
White-eye sp.	520 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Crested Myna	6 on roadside wires between Laotie Shan and the bus station most of the way back to Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
White-cheeked Starling	45 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. Just two flocks were seen – one of 15 & the other 30 birds.
Red-throated Thrush	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Daurian Redstart	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Common Stonechat	12 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Taiga Flycatcher	1 was heard at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Eurasian Tree Sparrow	30 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Alpine Accentor	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 11h30 on the 11/10/2011. They circled the Lighthouse/Coast Guard Station hill twice & even attempted to land.
Siberian Accentor	1 was heard near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Eastern Yellow Wagtail	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Grey Wagtail	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
White Wagtail	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.
Olive-backed Pipit	9 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011.

Wednesday 12 October 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun at 05h15 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie. I spent 2.5 hours at the regular early morning watch point before walking up to the Coastguard/Lighthouse compound. Unfortunately although its scheduled to open at 08h00 it didn't open for another 45 minutes. The entrance gate was unlocked and I suppose that I could have just walked in but I didn't want to upset the staff who could have legitimately stopped me using the vantage point immediately to the southern side of the Coast Guard building. Arriving there at 09h00 I stayed until 14h30. There were massive numbers of Eastern Buzzards moving today – but remarkably little else and once these had stopped I headed down for a drink and an ice cream. I then planned to catch the 16h30 bus back to Tieshan zhen – but I was flagged down by a black cab driver (an illegal or unlicensed taxi driver) and I asked him to take me back to Lushun. This he did and dropped me in the small park besides the naval base. It was low tide and I spent about 20 minutes (16h30-16h50) scanning the mudflats and looking through the gulls before taking another taxi for the last kilometre back to the hotel.

Weather

A decent day – there was modest, but certainly not as good as yesterday, long range visibility with Snake Island being just about visible. For much of the day it was quite difficult to see the horizon and to determine where the sea finished and the sky started! It was 14°C (six degrees warmer than yesterday) near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h45, there was about 6/8 cloud cover and hardly any wind in the early morning and the first blue sky of the day wasn't seen until almost 11h00. . The temperature rose to 23°C at 10h30 to 22°C at 12h00. A modest south-south-westerly wind started at about 09h15 and this soon instigated a major movement of Eastern Buzzards. The air pressure, stable for much of the morning, declined slightly from midday onwards and was 1009 hPa at 10h30, 1008 hPa at 12h00 and 1007 hPa at 13h45.

Ornithological highlights

Today's movement of Eastern Buzzards (3490 birds were counted) was the undoubted highlight and I spent most of the day watching them – often concentrating on an area out at sea. Nevertheless surprisingly few other raptors were moving with them. Once the buzzard movement had finished I spent a short time birding the bushes – but these were very quiet. Today’s only new birds were an unidentifiable spoonbill and three ringtail Hen Harriers.

Common Pheasant	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Spoonbill sp.	1 distant bird flew high to the south over the sea off Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Grey Heron	25 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Great Egret	1 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Little Egret	3 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Oriental Honey-buzzard	3 singles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Black Kite	20 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. The first 12 birds were seen at 06h08 & flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 1, 5 & 12.
Hen Harrier	3 ringtails flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. The first two birds did so at 06h12.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	69 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. Almost all of these flew south. The first four birds were seen at 05h48.
Northern Goshawk	18, including just one adult and 12 juveniles, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Grey-faced Buzzard	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Eastern Buzzard	3490 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. The first four birds of the day were seen at 05h52 & the vast majority of today’s buzzards (3181 birds) were actively migrating and flew south, out and across the bay during the day. Their passage was most intense in the four hours between 09h30-13h30 when 2993 birds (94% of the total seen actively migrating) were logged. Passage started when a light south-south-west wind picked up and stopped almost as soon as the wind ceased. Significantly the wind dropped for a while in the late morning – and the number of buzzards heading out to sea declined accordingly. Despite the massive increase in numbers they were much easier to count than yesterday with most of the active migrants passing on a narrow front between the Chinese bird photographer’s concrete platform and the Lighthouse/Coast Guard station. I only counted birds once they were a full binocular’s width offshore and, unlike yesterday, very few birds (probably less than 30 all day) turned back towards land – and those that did were subtracted from the total. Passage stopped abruptly at about 13h35 as the skies suddenly cleared, the temperature rose two degrees (to 24°C) and the wind veered slightly from being a southerly to a south-westerly before ceasing almost entirely. Once passage had stopped there were still 310 Eastern Buzzards thermalling around the point. Most of these remained in the area for the next 20-30 minutes before gradually dispersing – perhaps they’ll try to cross again tomorrow... Today’s count surpasses those that have been made for the entire autumn at Beidaihe, Hebei where Williams et al. (1992) noted autumn totals of 1119 bird-days in 1986, 3162 bird-days in 1987, 1861 bird-days in 1988, 1534 bird-days in 1989 and 2210 bird-days in 1990. What’s more today’s Laotie Shan tally is more than three times the largest day-count ever made at Beidaihe! The highest one day counts from Beidaihe during this same well-watched period in the late 1980s were 1100 on 11 October 1988, 1048 on 6 October 1990, 992 on 14 October 1987 & 740 on 16 October 1989.
Greater Spotted Eagle VU	2 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 07h57 on the 12/10/2011.
Common Kestrel	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 06h21 on the 12/10/2011.
Amur Falcon	126 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. 46 of these were actively migrating while about another 80 appeared in the later afternoon and were probably planning to roost overnight somewhere nearby.
Eurasian Hobby	4 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Peregrine Falcon	1 adult at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Black-headed Gull	150 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Black-tailed Gull	870 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 12/10/2011. Today’s count was 85 birds fewer than just under two weeks ago when there were 955 here on the 29/9/2011.
Mew Gull	8 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 12/10/2011. They were all second-winters or older.
'Herring Gull Assemblage'	45 in the Lushun-Laotie Shan area on the 12/10/2011. About five were around the small fishing harbour (Chen Jia cun) at Laotie Shan while the other 40 were 870 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun itself.
Mongolian Gull	5 on the tidal mudflats when viewed from the park near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Oriental Turtle Dove	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Spotted Dove	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Ashy Minivet	371 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Common Magpie	120 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Yellow-bellied Tit	27 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. Flock sizes were as follows – 1 (not seen), 1 (not seen), 1 (not seen), 1 (not seen), 2, 8 & 13.
Japanese Tit	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Chinese Penduline Tit	2 singles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Eurasian Skylark	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Light-vented Bulbul	7 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Barn Swallow	40 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	1000 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Manchurian Bush Warbler	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. These included the same bird as yesterday in the scrub immediately below the Coast Guard Station.
Dusky Warbler	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Radde's Warbler	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Pallas's Leaf Warbler	8 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Yellow-browed Warbler	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Black-browed Reed Warbler	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Vinous-throated Parrotbill	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Chinese Hill Babbler	4, two pairs, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
White-eye sp.	460 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Crested Myna	10 on the same roadside wires as yesterday between Laotie Shan and Tieshan zhen on the 11/10/2011.

White-cheeked Starling	15 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. Just two flocks were seen – the first of 8 and the second of 7 birds.
Red-throated Thrush	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Thrush sp.	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Daurian Redstart	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Eurasian Tree Sparrow	20 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Alpine Accentor	3, a pair and then a single, near the Lighthouse/Coast Guard station buildings at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. The pair actually came in and landed on the steep hillside below the viewing platform at about 11h25 while the single bird was seen at 12h52 but just kept flying.
Eastern Yellow Wagtail	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Grey Wagtail	6 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
White Wagtail	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Richard's Pipit	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Olive-backed Pipit	30 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Buff-bellied Pipit	8 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Brambling	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Grey-capped Greenfinch	342 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. Flock sizes were as follows – 1, 3, 3, 4, 5, 7, 7, 8, 8, 8, 9, 10, 10, 13, 15, 15, 16, 20, 21, 25, 30, 40 & 55.

Black-faced Bunting	20 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.
Pallas's Bunting	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011.

Thursday 13 October 2011. Morning at Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun at 05h15 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. I spent just almost three hours at the regular early morning watch point before walking up to the vantage point immediately to the southern side of the Coast Guard building in the Lighthouse compound. Arriving there at 09h00 I stayed until 11h30. There was very poor visibility and it was extremely quiet with no Eastern Buzzards and indeed few other birds moving today. Leaving at 11h30 I walked back down to the main road and soon found an unlicensed taxi to take me back to Lushun. I spent the afternoon and evening catching up on paperwork.

Weather

A poor day – it was misty throughout the morning with visibility almost dropping to as little as one kilometre (and hence becoming fog). The Chinese bird photographer's concrete platform was just about visible from the rear of the Coast Guard station for example. It was still, cloudless and 15°C when I arrived at 05h40. The atmospheric pressure had remained pretty stable overnight and was 1012 hPa at the watch point. The wind gradually picked up from the south at about 09h00 – and the pressure up on the viewing platform was 1005 hPa. There were a few spots of rain around 10h30, the pressure remained stable and the visibility didn't improve all day.

Common Pheasant	2 were heard at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Mallard	3 in the tidal inlet near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Great Egret	2 in the tidal inlet near the Naval Harbour in Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Black Kite	2, an adult & a juvenile, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h05.
Northern Goshawk	1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Eastern Buzzard	205 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011. The first two birds appeared at 06h02 and birds then continued to appear throughout the morning – but none were seen even attempting to head out across the bay. It's likely that most, if not all, of today's birds were part of the large flock that didn't make the crossing yesterday and because of this today's birds were not included in the on-going bird-day tally.
Amur Falcon	188 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Eurasian Hobby	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Black-headed Gull	1 in the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Black-tailed Gull	10 in & around the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
'Herring Gull Assemblage'	2 in & around the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Oriental Turtle Dove	1 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Spotted Dove	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Ashy Minivet	127 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Common Magpie	100 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Yellow-bellied Tit	8, in a single flock, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Japanese Tit	4 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Chinese Penduline Tit	55 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011. Flock sizes were 1 (not seen), 1 (not seen), 1 (not seen), 3, 4 & 45.

Eurasian Skylark	7 singles flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Light-vented Bulbul	15, a flock of seven and another of eight, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Barn Swallow	20 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	60 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011. The first bird wasn't seen until 10h23 and today's tally represents a massive reduction on recent days.
Manchurian Bush Warbler	1 was heard again in the Lighthouse/Coastguard compound at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Dusky Warbler	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Radde's Warbler	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Pallas's Leaf Warbler	5 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.

Olive-backed Pipit	73 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Pechora Pipit	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Red-throated Pipit	2 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Buff-bellied Pipit	11 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Brambling	3 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Grey-capped Greenfinch	297 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011. Flock sizes were – 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 2, 2, 3, 3, 4, 5, 6, 6, 8, 10, 10, 12, 13, 13, 14, 15, 15, 16, 18, 21, 22, 22, 24 & 25.
Common Rosefinch	8 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Grosbeak sp.	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.
Black-faced Bunting	15 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.

Friday 14 October 2011. All day Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun at 05h15 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. I again spent 3.5 hours at the regular early morning watch point before walking up to the Coastguard/Lighthouse compound. Arriving there at 09h00 I stayed until 15h30. There was poor visibility most of the day – but a southerly wind and large numbers of Eastern Buzzards were obviously keen to make the crossing over to Shandong and continually headed out only to return minutes later. Many of them repeatedly circled the Coastguard/Lighthouse compound and afforded superb views and I spend much of the day watching these. There were two periods when they did indeed head out and I made my second count in excess of 1000 birds! I caught the 16h30 bus back to Tieshan zhen and a taxi from there back to the hotel.

Weather

Another day with poor visibility. The horizon was always difficult to see – and I never saw either of the radar dishes on the ridge tops until the early afternoon. It was 13°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h45, there was about 3/8 cloud cover and no wind. The humidity was high. The temperature had risen to 16°C by 07h30 and to 20°C by 14h30. A modest southerly wind started at about 08h45 and this soon instigated a movement of Eastern Buzzards – though they stopped when the wind dropped 45 minutes later only to start again when the wind picked up again in the early afternoon! The air pressure was stable for much of the morning but declined ever so slightly later in the day. Down at the watch point it was 1008 hPa at 05h45 and again at 07h30 while higher up near the Coast Guard Station it was 1002 hPa at 08h45, 1001 hPa at 11h30 and 1000 hPa at 13h00

Common Pheasant	2 were heard at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Oriental Honey-buzzard	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Black Kite	57 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. The first bird wasn't seen until 07h26. Flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 2, 3, 4, 4, 5, 5, 6, 7, 7 & 7.
Japanese Sparrowhawk	3 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Eurasian Sparrowhawk	15 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 05h44.
Northern Goshawk	8, two adults & six juveniles, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Grey-faced Buzzard	1 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.

Eastern Buzzard	1376 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. The first two birds were seen at 05h54 and there were soon over 150 birds circling the end of the peninsula apparently eager to cross. There were two widely separate periods when birds did head south today. The first movement, apparently spurred by an increase in the strength of the southerly wind, was between 09h00-09h30 when 620 birds headed south across the bay but 160 of these came almost straight back. A more concerted movement occurred between 12h30-15h00 when 911 birds headed south – none of these were seen coming back! This second movement was also spurred by a strengthening of the southerly wind – and a slight clearing of the skies.
Greater Spotted Eagle VU	3 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. One, two or three juveniles were seen on three occasions – 3 at 09h25, 1 at 12h20 & 2 at 14h13.
Common Kestrel	2 singles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Amur Falcon	241 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. 136 birds headed south & out to see while the other 105 were seen over the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun in the later afternoon. The latter were probably going to roost nearby.
Eurasian Hobby	10 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Black-tailed Gull	27 in the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Mongolian Gull	8 in the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Oriental Turtle Dove	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Ashy Minivet	136 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Common Magpie	150 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Yellow-bellied Tit	9 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. Flock sizes were as follows 1 heard, 1 heard, 1 heard, 1 heard, 2 & 3.
Japanese Tit	8 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Chinese Penduline Tit	4 birds were heard &, for the sake of the log, assumed to be singles flying south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Eurasian Skylark	7 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Light-vented Bulbul	24 in a single flock near the watch point at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Barn Swallow	100 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Red-rumped Swallow	500 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Dusky Warbler	7 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Radde's Warbler	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Pallas's Leaf Warbler	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Yellow-browed Warbler	6 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Black-browed Reed Warbler	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Vinous-throated Parrotbill	2 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Chinese Hill Babbler	2, a pair, at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
White-eye sp.	43 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
Red-billed Starling	1, with two unidentified starlings, flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011.
White-cheeked Starling	13 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. One flock was of 3 birds, the other of 10.

Saturday 15 October 2011. Early morning Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun at 05h15 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. I spent about 2.5 hours at the regular early morning watch point before walking up to the Coastguard/Lighthouse compound. Arriving there around 09h00 headed around to spend some time sea watching – the visibility had improved during the morning and I'd earlier seen a steady passage of gulls over the sea. However in the time that it took me to reach the sea watching site the weather had worsened, it was now raining very hard again and visibility was poor. I gave it 15 minutes, saw nothing and, with the weather showing no signs of improving, I decided to head back to the hotel. I hitched a ride from a truck and then took a taxi. Arriving back at the hotel at 10h45 it wasn't much longer before the rain stopped and I could even see a movement of raptors from my hotel room! Frustrated I buried myself in to some long overdue work...

Weather

A poor early morning. There had been an intense thunder storm during the night (lasting at least one hour from 02h15) and there were still rumbles of thunder and flashes of lightning when I arrived at the morning watch point. Visibility was much better than the previous two days with the ridge tops and even Snake Island being clearly visible. It was 11°C, there was about 7/8 cloud cover, little wind (this was forecast to veer from the southwest, through westerly to a north-westerly during the day) and the pressure was stable at 1004 hPa. However it started to rain at 06h15 – and continued to do so very hard for almost an hour. As soon as the rain stopped there was an emigration of Amur Falcons and shortly after that a movement of passerines. Unfortunately the vast majority of the latter were too high to identify. It started to rain again from about 07h45 – this time even harder.

Once I'd left Laotie Shan and was back in the hotel in Lushun it wasn't long before the weather picked up and the sun came out!

Sunday 16 October 2011. Morning Laotie Shan, Lushun.

I left the Xin Jiyuan Dajiudian, Lushun at 05h15 and drove back to the Lighthouse car park at Laotie Shan. I again spent 3.5 hours at the regular early morning watch point before walking up and spending some time down the valley trail towards the beach. At 11h00 I took a black taxi back to Tieshan zhen and a regular taxi from there to the hotel. A family tragedy back in the UK meant that I hurriedly checked out of the hotel and headed back to Dalian airport where I was able to catch an evening flight back to Beijing. I flew back to the UK the following morning.

Weather

Superb visibility with a crisp horizon and even the Changdao Islands being visible again. It was 13°C near the Laotie Shan watch point at 05h45, there was about 1/8 cloud cover and a strong north-west wind. The wind slowly veered around to the north during the morning, the temperature had risen to 16°C by 07h30 and to 18°C by 10h00. The air pressure was steadily rising throughout the day and rose from 1006 hPa at 05h45, to 1009 by 09h10 and 1013 by the time I left one hour later.

Ornithological highlights

Nothing terribly remarkable with another broad front high elevation early morning movement of passerines. There was just one, long overdue, addition to the trip list in the shape of four Common Goldeneye over the sea. Other goodies included only the second free flying Short-eared Owl, two more Alpine Accentors and an overdue increase in the number of migrating Chinese Penduline Tits and Eurasian Skylarks. However the undoubted bird of the day, an Aquila eagle sp., failed to come close enough to confidently identify.

BIRD LIST

Four figures are given in parentheses - the first two of these figures details how many days out of 23, that particular species was seen in southern Liaoning. The third figure notes the highest daily count and the fourth the number of bird-days. Hence the entry for Japanese Quail reads (6/23 4 9)- birds were noted on 6 of the 23 days, with up to four individuals on any one date and with a total of nine bird-days.

Names, order & taxonomy follow the CBR [China Bird Report] Checklist of Birds of China v2.0 (2011) accessed on-line 15 Sept. 2011.

 21 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 30/9/2011.
 189 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 1/10/2011. (Peter Cawley, Paul Holt & Terry Townshend). The first bird flew over at 06h54 & flock sizes were 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 2, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4, 4, 6, 6, 6, 6, 7, 8, 9, 9, 10, 14, 15, 18, 18 & 25. Today was the only day of the autumn where flocks larger than 11 birds were seen. Although over 10,000 have been seen in a day in Taiwan today's count is probably a record count for mainland China! (Richard Lewthwaite in litt. 9 October 2011).

30 in southern Liaoning on 2/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h02. Flock sizes were 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 2, 3, 5 & 13 birds. 17 were seen at Laotie Shan in the morning while 13 more were seen from the expressway just to the northwest of Dalian city in the early evening.

34 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 4/10/2011. The first birds (four) were seen at 06h13 & flock sizes were as follows – 2, 4, 4, 4, 5, 6 & 9.

9 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 5/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h38. Just three birds were seen well enough to age and all three were juvenile. Birds were encountered in flocks of 1, 1, 1, 1 & 4.

8 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 6/10/2011. The first bird was at -5h41 & had presumably roosted somewhere nearby. Flock sizes were as follows – 1, 1, 1, 1 & 3.

27 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. Birds were seen in parties of 1, 1, 4, 4, 6 & 11.

832 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. This is easily my largest ever count in China (but was easily surpassed the following day). The first bird was seen at 05h57. On a couple of occasions, once at around 08h00 & again around 14h00 over 150 Eastern Buzzards were in the air together! Passage tailed off shortly after 14h00 with birds lingering around the point between the Chinese bird photographer's concrete platform and the Lighthouse/Coast Guard station until I left at 14h30. A sample count of 122 birds yielded 17 adults (14 %) & 105 juveniles (86 %).

3490 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. (Paul Holt). The first four birds of the day were seen at 05h52 & the vast majority of today's buzzards (3181 birds) were actively migrating and flew south, out and across the bay during the day. Their passage was most intense in the four hours between 09h30-13h30 when 2993 birds (94% of the total seen actively migrating) were logged. Passage started when a light south-south-west wind picked up and stopped almost as soon as the wind ceased. Significantly the wind dropped for a while in the late morning – and the number of buzzards heading out to sea declined accordingly. Despite the massive increase in numbers they were much easier to count than yesterday with most of the active migrants passing on a narrow front between the Chinese bird photographer's concrete platform and the Lighthouse/Coast Guard station. I only counted birds once they were a full binocular's width offshore and, unlike yesterday, very few birds (probably less than 30 all day) turned back towards land – and those that did were subtracted from the total. Passage stopped abruptly at about 13h35 as the skies suddenly cleared, the temperature rose two degrees (to 24°C) and the wind veered slightly from being a southerly to a south-westerly before ceasing almost entirely. Once passage had stopped there were still 310 Eastern Buzzards thermalling around the point. Most of these remained in the area for the next 20-30 minutes before gradually dispersing – perhaps they'll try to cross again tomorrow... Today's count surpasses those that have been made for the entire autumn at Beidaihe, Hebei where Williams et al. (1992) noted autumn totals of 1119 bird-days in 1986, 3162 bird-days in 1987, 1861 bird-days in 1988, 1534 bird-days in 1989 and 2210 bird-days in 1990. What's more today's Laotie Shan tally is more than three times the largest day-count ever made at Beidaihe! The highest one day counts from Beidaihe during this same well-watched period in the late 1980s were 1100 on 11 October 1988, 1048 on 6 October 1990, 992 on 14 October 1987 & 740 on 16 October 1989.

205 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011. The first two birds appeared at 06h02 and birds then continued to appear throughout the morning – but none were seen even attempting to head out across the bay. It's likely that most, if not all, of today's birds were part of the large flock that didn't make the crossing yesterday and because of this today's birds were not included in the on-going bird-day tally.

1376 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. The first two birds were seen at 05h54 and there were soon over 150 birds circling the end of the peninsula apparently eager to cross. There were two widely separate periods when birds did head south today. The first movement, apparently spurred by an increase in the strength of the southerly wind, was between 09h00-09h30 when 620 birds headed south across the bay but 160 of these came almost straight back. A more concerted movement occurred between 12h30-15h00 when 911 birds headed south – none of these were seen coming back! This second movement was also spurred by a strengthening of the southerly wind – and a slight clearing of the skies.

20 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 15/10/2011. The first seven birds were seen at 06h00.
145 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 16/10/2011. There were 135 birds in the air by 05h55.

GREATER SPOTTED EAGLE Aquila clanga VU 乌雕

(15/23 7 45)

Given its reluctance to cross large bodies of water this species, possibly more than any other, was difficult to accurately count. Between 45 and 71 bird-days were recorded with between one and seven, but possibly as many as 17, birds being logged on 15 of the 22 days we were at Laotie Shan (26/9 – 16/10/2011).

- 1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 26/9/2011. First seen at 11h45 it slowly drifted south before turning around & heading back north. What was almost certainly the same bird was seen again just over 1.5 hours later at 13h22.
- 1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 29/9/2011. Like the bird of a few days ago it flew south, reached the headland and then promptly turned back north.
- 2 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 30/9/2011. First seen at 13h54 one of them promptly turned back north while the other attempted to fly south and across Bohai Bay. Both birds were photographed.
- 4 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on 1/10/2011. The first bird appeared at 10h17 and headed almost straight out over the bay, the second appeared just 11 minutes later & soon turned back north while the third and fourth were together, appeared at 13h01, and only circled for a very short time before returning back north. The first two birds were photographed.
- 1 juvenile circled the point at Laotie Shan, Lushun 11h18 on 2/10/2011. It soon turned back north.
- 2 separate juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 4/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h29 & the second bird had a damaged leg and was first seen at 10h16. Neither off them flew out to sea.
- 2-6 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 6/10/2011. It was difficult to decide whether I was seeing the same two birds repeatedly or whether six different individuals were involved. Nevertheless two birds were logged at 08h25, one at 11h11, another at 11h44 & two juveniles again at 14h20.
- 5-11 birds flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first sighting was of five birds (four juveniles and one slightly older bird) that flew south at 11h38, the second sighting was of four juveniles that did the same at 12h27, another juvenile flew south at 13h10 while the final bird flew south at 15h24. It was again difficult to determine whether we were seeing the same birds or not and although we didn't see a single one of them return north it seems unlikely that we saw 11 different individuals.
- 1 immature flew north near the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 10h18 on the 9/10/2011.
- 7-17 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. All sightings as follows – a juvenile flew south at 06h03 (just five minutes after official sunrise) & was later seen to turn back north; an immature at 07h01; a juvenile at 07h05; three birds (two immatures and a juvenile) at 07h20; a juvenile at 07h51 & a different juvenile at 07h58; three juveniles at 09h38; five juveniles at 10h10. The only bird of the afternoon was a single juvenile at 13h49. None were actually seen to head purposefully out to sea and quite a few were watched turning back north. As a minimum there were seven birds (five juveniles that were seen together & two immatures) while as a maximum there were 17 different sightings (but no doubt some duplication)
- 7-12 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. Birds were seen as follows – an adult at 07h54 with an additional adult at 08h15; 5 (four juveniles and an immature) at 09h24; a juvenile at 10h56; a juvenile at 11h13 finally 2 birds (a juvenile & an immature) came in off the sea at 13h39.

2 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 07h57 on the 12/10/2011.
3 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. One, two or three juveniles were seen on three occasions – 3 at 09h25, 1 at 12h20 & 2 at 14h13.
1 juvenile at Laotie Shan, Lushun at 07h25 on the 15/10/2011.
2 or 3 juveniles at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 16/10/2011. The first was seen at 06h45, the second at 07h02 and that bird was joined by another at 07h10.

7 between Jinshitan, Pikou and north towards Zhuanghe on the 3/10/2011. Three of these were around the inland portion of the Jinshitan Sea Farming Ponds, Jinzhouqu; one more was near Daliujia, Pulandian; another was near the tidal river close to Jinchang cun, Pulandian and the last two were besides the shrimp or fishponds north of Pikou, Pulandian.

1053 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 4/10/2011. The vast majority of these (999 birds passed during the 25 minutes between 16h15-16h40 and it appeared that a large proportion of these had decided not to cross the bay and to roost near the point overnight.

1202 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 5/10/2011. The vast majority of these (in fact all but 32 birds!) were seen in the 50 minutes between 05h57 & 06h45 and had presumably roosted near the tip of the Laotie Shan Peninsula overnight and were heading straight out to sea. No doubt many of these were the same birds as those logged the previous evening.

7 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 6/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 06h56.

1200 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 05h47 but very few (just 11 individuals!) were seen before 15h45 when a flock of over 1000 birds arrived from the north. Just over 200 of these seemed to head out to see but they quite probably all came back and joined the 800 or so that were milling around the point. They all remained in this same area until we left at 17h30 and were probably going to roost somewhere near the end of the Peninsula.

971 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. After the impressive pre-roost gathering near the point yesterday evening I expected to see large numbers of Amurs around the point in the early morning – but there were only a few (159) and it's likely that the fog prevented me seeing most of them as they left their roost. However there was a modest southerly movement in the early afternoon – and I counted 783 over the Xiao Dong Gou ringing station in the two hours after 12h30.

606 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. Most of these (544 birds) were seen heading south from the watch point in the early morning with decent passage starting at 06h08 and lasting just over one hour. Only a small number of birds were present in that area in the evening.

1830 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. (Paul Holt). The first two birds were not seen until 06h23 – a full 25 minutes after official sunrise but the morning's numbers were unremarkable. Small scale passage started in the late morning but the main event wasn't until the evening. I arrived way too early for the 16h30 bus and was waiting out of the way – about 50 metres back up the road towards the lighthouse and adjacent to the lower road up to the Yihai Manor (an apparently up market guest house that doesn't admit foreigners). A pre-roost movement of Amurs, like the ones we'd seen on a couple of previous occasions already this autumn, was already underway when I arrived at 16h00 & it soon became obvious that this movement was a significant one. Unlike the situation on the evening of the 7 October tonight's gathering was gradual and slow paced allowing ample time to watch and count the birds. It was a windless, clear and still evening with some high cloud cover and all the falcons arrived from the south (!) and crossed the road I was standing on in the same direction (north). The movement was most intense between 16h05-16h25 and stopped almost as suddenly as it had started. Largely over by 16h35 only a small trickle of birds continued to move north after 16h45 with the very last bird being seen at 16h55 (a full half-an-hour before official sunset and 40 & 45 minutes respectively before I saw my last Black Kite & Eurasian Sparrowhawks of the day!) The day count of 1830 is solely of birds in this pre-roost movement with none of those seen heading out to sea earlier in the day being included. Today's count is apparently the highest autumn count anywhere in China, being surpassed by a spring count of 2000 at Honghe, Jinping, Yunnan on 13 May 2009 ( WJ in China Bird Report 2008-2009)

130 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 11/10/2011. The first bird was seen at 05h41. Today's count was a massive, and surprising reduction on the number logged yesterday. Despite the clear skies and lack of wind there were no birds in a pre-roost gathering.

126 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 12/10/2011. 46 of these were actively migrating while about another 80 appeared in the later afternoon and were probably planning to roost overnight somewhere nearby.

188 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 13/10/2011.

241 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 14/10/2011. 136 birds headed south & out to sea while the other 105 were seen over the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun in the later afternoon. The latter were probably going to roost nearby.

132 headed out to sea over the small fishing harbour of Chen Jia cun at Laotie Shan, Lushun between 07h05-07h15 on the 15/10/2011.

Truly remarkable numbers (20,130 bird days!) were counted at Laotie Shan during the period 24/9-16/10/2011. Birds were logged every day but the facts that our peak count (7549 birds and over 3.5 times the second highest) occurred just five day's in to our visit and and that numbers dropped off rapidly after the 4 October suggest that many probably passed before we arrived.

589 flew south at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 24/9/2011. Flocks of between seven & 90 birds were a major feature of the day. Probably a record count for China – but today afternoon's figures were soon surpassed.
750 over Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 25/9/2011. There's probably some duplication in the number of birds that were actually counted (820) hence the slightly lesser estimate might be more reliable. The largest flock was a party of about 160 birds!

4000 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 6/10/2011. Hardly any were seen until the early afternoon when a modest passage began. In addition to the passage a flock gradually built up that by late afternoon numbered at least 4000 birds.
2500 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 7/10/2011.
3620 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 8/10/2011. There was a modest southerly movement all day but this picked up between 13h00 & 14h00 during and I counted 1900 birds during that hour alone.
8000 at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 9/10/2011. (Paul Holt). Almost all of these were counted from the morning watch point with birds first appearing in a series of tight flocks as if they were just leaving a roost, from 05h50 onwards. They immediately headed off in a south-westerly direction – and were probably going to cross the bay immediately. Shortly after these tight post roost gatherings had left a marked movement of birds from further afield commenced with a constant stream of swallows passing for another hour when the rate started to slow. Remarkably I saw rather few swallows after about 10h00 but another, and more modest, evening gathering of perhaps 400-500 birds, occurred near the point.
3400 in a pre-roost gathering at Laotie Shan, Lushun on the 10/10/2011. Birds were seen throughout the day (after the first & late bird at 05h57) but numbers increased during the late afternoon and this count was made at about 16h45 (almost 45 minutes before sunset).
